

In a private note from Hon. C. W. Kendall he informs us that the press and public dispatches of the country have misrepresented him in his remarks in defense of the bill of last session of Congress increasing the pay of members. Mr. Kendall declares his willingness to stand by all that he has said on the subject, but does not wish to have credit for words or sentiments never uttered by him. That there may be no mistake in the future about what he did or did not say upon the subject, in the recent debate thereon, we give below his speech entire, as published in the Congressional Record, Dec. 10, 1873. Mr. Kendall said:

Mr. Speaker, I am one of those who believe that the people's Representative should obey the will of the people, and that he will be fairly and clearly expressed. Now, Sir, he is in a position to do this or to resign his trust. While, as such Representative, I will carefully ascertain and cheerfully obey the voice of the people, I will not abuse my way by meanly trimming this way and that to conform to what I am conscious is a groundless and senseless popular clamor. Such conduct, such trimming, the American people—always right in the long run—will only despise. And I am happy to say that such is most eminently the sentiment and profound feeling of that noble and generous portion of the American people who have honored me with a place upon this floor. I have tried too long in the far West not to understand something of the difference there is between the sober second thought of the people and their first ebullition of sentiment when misled either by a specious demagogue, a frantic mob, or a corrupted or partisan press. I suppose, Sir, that we all have about the average amount of human frailties to account for. But, among that sum total you will find as a characteristic sin, that of meanness or stinginess toward those who serve in a public or private capacity. The most unselfish labor of the humblest deliver in the earth commands a price that brings with it, in a few years, an independence of comfort and plenty. For diligent and faithful service in whatever position, or station, or office—in the field, or mine, or forest, at the bar or on the bench, or in the administration of municipal or county or State affairs—our people expect to pay well, without haggling and without small bargains.

So much I briefly promise, so far as I am concerned with my immediate constituency, to whose good sense and judgment I will very willingly submit my conduct in this salary business. Last Congress I voted uniformly in favor of the salary law as it now stands. Earlier in the session I voted uniformly against the repeal of the franking privilege. These measures have a bearing upon each other, and should be considered together. A careful estimate, made by the superintendent of the folding-room, of the postage distributed during last Congress by members of the House, amounted to nearly $2,000, or more accurately, $1,953. Why, Sir, I have here a schedule, a copy of which is upon the desk of every member, showing the amount of postage that must now be paid on the various documents that are now printed by Congress. For each of the 422 items from the list at random: the Agricultural Report must pay a postal charge of 42 cents. And I ask the gentlemen from Illinois and Ohio, and my respected but penny-wise and pound-foolish friend from the third district of Indiana [Mr. Holmes], what I am saying when I say about it? Will their constituency of farmers willingly forego their Agricultural Reports? Hardly. What then? Why, my good friends will of course gladly affix to five or six hundred of those valuable documents, let me hear a murmur of complaint at home.

Again, take the Census report—and who would not wish to have it? There are five volumes, and the postage ranges from fifty-two cents to one dollar and ten cents per volume. Now, of course, gentlemen mean to distribute these and other documents, just the same as ever. But the postage must be prepaid. Nevertheless, they will do it, I suppose, and so nearly two thousand dollars of their salary is expended, and for whose benefit? Who will tell me? Not for the people's use, surely; not for the efficiency of the postal service, for the resolution introduced recently will soon show. But you will send these volumes by express and have the charges collected on delivery, will you? Such a procedure would hardly be ventured upon just before an election, which you might happen to be candidates.

I refer also to our mining reports—to those most useful reports of Professor Hayden and of Professor Raymond, and of Lieutenant Wheeler, and to the magnificent work of that most accomplished gentleman and scientist, Clarence King. I know that I am saying when I say that that every man in the State of Nevada properly appreciates and would be glad to possess the reports. The few that have hitherto been printed scarcely begin to supply the demand; and, besides, the postage upon them will amount to from forty cents to two dollars and a half per set of volumes.

Consider this, if you please; consider, too, the multiplicity of other documents that we are in the habit of sending to our constituents—speeches in pamphlet—our own eloquence and the eloquence of our eloquent friends; the vast number of the speeches of my brilliant friend from New York [Mr. Cox], which we all so freely and gladly subscribe for and send away for the benefit of the country; consider that there is no mileage allowed under the new law, and no allowance for stationery or newspapers, and I am prepared to show, if I thought the occasion called for it, that, in my own case, the compensation under the old law was, per year, as follows:

Salary, $5,000 00
Mileage for the year, $5,000 00
(There were three sessions in the Congress, mileage attaching to each.) 1,574 40
Postage for one year on the regular copy of documents allowed each member for distribution, 975 30
Allowance for stationery and newspapers, 125 00
Estimated amount of postage on correspondence, speeches, and other public documents, and upon seeds distributed, 250 00
Total, $10,324 70

The salary under the new law of $7,500 per year includes everything—mileage, postage, allowance for stationery, and newspapers—everything except actual traveling expenses to and from the capital. And the only item that will vary this comparative statement will be such actual expenses, the amount of which has not been ascertained by the auditing committee.

Now, take the estimate, say for my distinguished friend from the first district of Pennsylvania, [Mr. Randall.] In his case the mileage was $60, and was allowed for only two sessions, he having been a member of the preceding Congress, as I hope he may be of many succeeding ones. The account stands thus:

Postage on regular quota of documents for one year, $975 30
Allowance for stationery and newspapers, 125 00
Estimated amount of postage on official correspondence, and other public documents, and upon seeds distributed, 250 00
Total, $1,350 30

Here was a wide inequality, which I thought, and still think, was unfair. Such inequality of compensations of no two members was alike. I believed this was unfair and unjust, and believed that the new salary bill would be best for all and best for the country; and I have seen no reason to change such belief.

As to the retroactive feature of the law, it is in accordance with a uniformity of precedent from the beginning of the Government down.

Mr. Clay had anticipated the objections of the people as to the propriety of members fixing their own compensation, and said:

"As to the amendment to defer its operation until the next Congress, he would remark that in his judgment, there was more propriety in the law ending than beginning there. It was more respectful to our successors to leave them free to determine what was the just measure of indemnity for their expenses, than for us to prescribe the rule for them. We can best judge for ourselves. With the respect to the supposed delinquency of our fixing upon our own compensation, let the Constitution, let the necessity of the case be reproached for that, not us."

Mr. Randolph offered an amendment to the bill, proposing to repeal the act of 1816, to deduct the back pay of members in excess of $6 per day, but it was rejected.

These precedents have been so well stated by my friend from Tennessee, [Mr. Bright,] that I use his language. He says:

"The people afterward repeatedly honored Mr. Clay with their confidence, and a great national party gave him a most enthusiastic support as a candidate for the Presidency. Mr. Calhoun afterward Senator, Cabinet officer, and was elected Vice President by the people. Mr. R. B. Johnson, author of the bill of 1816, was afterward elected Vice President by the people. Mr. McLean was afterward made one of the Supreme Judges, and he was warmly solicited to become a candidate for the Presidency in 1832, but he declined. Mr. Webster was afterward repeatedly in the Senate, in the Cabinet, supported by many warm friends as a candidate for the Presidency, and became illustrious as the greatest constitutional expounder of his age. James Clark was afterward elected Governor of Kentucky. To single out a few who received back pay under the act of 1816, Stephen A. Douglas and John Bell were induced by their respective parties as a candidate for the Presidency when the times were 'big with danger.' John Bell carried the State of Tennessee. Lewis Cass afterward became a Cabinet officer, and Lyman Walker House we deem it unnecessary to say, and obtain patents for the same for parties with or without their being present."

Having an associate Attorney at Washington, special attention will be given to obtaining patents to public lands and mines, as well as suits and business generally before the Department.

Believing that I have acted right in this whole matter, I shall oppose any change in the law as it now stands.

HAVING THIS DAY PURCHASED THE Walker House, we are now in possession of the two best hotels in Salt Lake City. Of the Walker House we deem it unnecessary to say anything in its behalf, its splendid design and elegant equipment being so well known to the public.

The CLIFT HOUSE, though not so well known as the Walker House—having been open but a few weeks—is first-class in all its appointments, the building being new and the furniture of the most fashionable and elegant style. The location of this house is central and commands a splendid view of the lake and ever snow-capped mountains and surrounding scenery.
